

ABSTRACT

The invention comprises a method of photochemical transformation of metallic and non-5 metallic ions in an aqueous environment. The method comprises exposing the ions to UV irradiation in the presence of an organic acid. The aqueous ions are reduced by the method and may form hydrides, alkyl or carbonyl compounds.